

Film Presentations on Rio Tinto's Mining

Wednesdays

Ojibwa Senior Center

Baraga, Michigan

12:30pm and again at 6pm

This Film Series is hosted by the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community (KBIC) Natural Resources Department Mining Outreach and Education Program

Wednesday, March 14: Four Corners

A National Sacrifice Area tells the stories of Native people impacted by strip-mining and uranium mining and milling

Wednesday, April 11: In the Light of Reverence

Discusses Native American religious freedom rights in relation to mining and other developments throughout the United States

Wednesday, May 9: Tar Creek

Discusses the largest Superfund site in America, near Native communities, left by a large lead and zinc mine in northeastern Oklahoma

Wednesday, June 13: Poison in the Rockies

Discusses threats to water quality and ecosystems in Colorado due to mining

Wednesday, July 11: American Outrage

Two elderly Western Shoshone sisters who received historic international recognition of their rights involving the confiscation of their land for gold mining interests in Nevada

Prior films presentations:

January - Under Rich Earth, discusses human rights and mining companies in the Junin community of Ecuador, Wednesday, Jan. 11, in Baraga. Learn more about this film and view a trailer online at <http://underrichearth.ryecinema.com/>

February - Locked Out, about Rio Tinto's treatment of workers and communities in the U.S. and around the world

Submitted by and for more information contact:

Jessica Koski

Keweenaw Bay Indian Community Mining Technical Assistant

906-524-5757 ext. 25